It started out as a list of projects I was having trouble finding things to work on but not tired of helping people find stuff so it grew. It covers most areas: games, servers, REST API's, apps, data visualizations, data science and machine learning. I'm going to run it for a while then I'll list other things I find interesting. ~~~ Yhippa This is really interesting. Thank you for writing it up. Have you thought about curating all of this information and making it easier to find? I could see this being a big opportunity for a site that is solely about covering all of the software and tech related content in Nigeria. Maybe it would be a good fit? ~~~ barry-cotter I think an important thing is to make sure any useful projects are promoted rather than people trying to promote their own projects. There's already a dozen to hundreds of projects of all sorts that could fit the description. Doing them all in one go would be unwieldy. The idea is to build a bunch of these things and then put a small base in the middle of the group of front loaders and have people enter the base to get access to water, food and maybe even the answers to life's important questions. Trey Taggart and Robert Rouviere teamed up to develop this amazing design and I can't wait to see it start to take shape. Here's a video of it in
